

Jim Watson is a Wildlife Research Scientist with the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) and lead researcher for the statewide raptor studies. He has spent the past 46 years studying raptors in the western United States and abroad. Jim's research focus includes raptor population dynamics, migration ecology and management of raptors in human landscapes.