

Ruth Milner is a District Wildlife Biologist primarily covering Island, San Juan and Snohomish Counties for Washington Dept. of Fish and Wildlife. She earned her BS and MS degrees in Wildlife Science from the Univ. of WA. Her position focuses on a variety of species, including game species and non-hunted species. For the last decade she has been fortunate to be able to devote some time to shorebirds in the Skagit and Stillaguamish River Deltas. She was instrumental in getting that area nominated as a Western Hemisphere Reserve Network site of Regional importance and has helped facilitate understanding how avian species respond to estuary restoration projects.
