Welcome to the 23rd Annual CAMANO ISLAND STUDIO TOUR

After a two-year hiatus, the studio tour is back for Mother's Day weekend in 2022!

This year marks the 23rd year that artists on Camano Island and Stanwood have invited the public into their studios and galleries to share their creativity and love of art and community. In that time, the studio tour has become the biggest tourist event on the Island, contributing to a growing artist community with nearly 100 members of the Camano Arts Association (CAA).

Part of what makes the tour unique is the blend of established and new artists representing a diverse array of mediums and visual arts.

This year, there are four new artists on the tour, including cover artist Tasha Smith. Other new artists include Amy Bush, Melissa Jander and Joe Smith who are a part of the 24 studios in this year's tour. The tour also features five galleries, including the renowned Matzke Gallery and sculpture park owned by CAA co-founder Karla Matzke, along with Sunnysore Studio, Forté Music Dance Art, Stanwood House, and Guided Gallery.

We are all thrilled to welcome back past visitors to reconnect and are excited to invite new art lovers to what is arguably one of the most iconic studio tours in the Puget Sound region.

Because art lives on Camano Island.

A first-time participant in the Camano Studio Tour, Tasha Smith is a passionate collage artist and nature lover. Blending her love of nature and the outdoors with her training as an artist with a minor in Fine Art from Oregon State University, she shares that she feels most alive and connected in the natural world.

An avid backpacker and hiker since her early childhood, Tasha explains that she has always enjoyed slowing down to take in the beauty of nature.

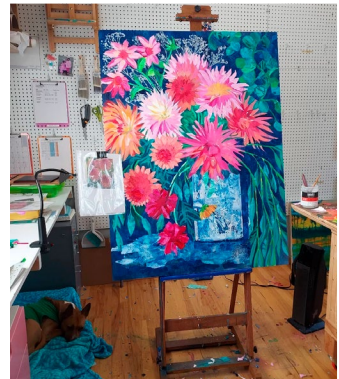

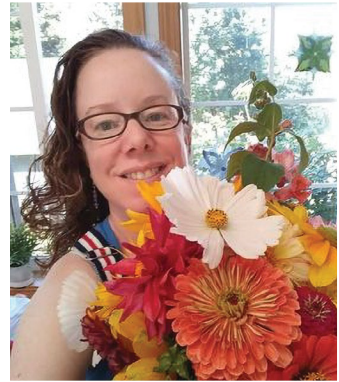

"Nature has always been important to me," Tasha said. "But it wasn't until I began this new style of collage art, incorporating physical aspects of nature into my artwork, that I truly grew to appreciate just how important it is to me."

Collecting flora and fauna, she often creates monoprints that are used in her pieces. Her artistic approach starts with an acrylic under-painting on a birch panel. Once satisfied with the image, she proceeds to rip and glue paper which has been painted and printed using acrylic paint to bring color, vibrancy, and longevity to the piece. The effect is an appearance of a colorful painting, that upon closer inspection reveals a painted paper collage.

Tasha moved to Camano Island in 2018 and in addition to spending time working in her studio, she is the busy mother of three daughters, ages 14, 12, and 9.

"It is such a joy to be a part of a community of artists on Camano Island," Tasha said. "I'm humbled and inspired to be named this year's cover artist and cannot wait to connect with visitors to the island in my first Studio Tour."

Art lives on Camano Island

To see a sound
To gaze upon time
To travel through imagination and come out the other side

On an island

We drive

Mapping our course under a canopy of trees as winding roads transport us to the birthplace of creation

Art

The true expression of the intangible but significant
The evidence of our connection despite our differences
The visual representation of what it means to love

To see what is unseeable
To touch what has always been and has yet to be
To transform a moment into an epiphany

On an island

We welcome you to join Camano Arts Association (CAA) as an artist, sponsor, art lover or as a patron.

As a mix of local fine artists, art enthusiasts, and local business people, CAA members see the benefits of promoting fine visual arts and art-related activities in the Stanwood-Camano Island community, including granting annual college scholarships to aspiring young artists, and regular monthly arts programs.

We meet monthly and work on a number of exciting arts activities.

Join us and be a part of ensuring art continues to live in the Camano Island and Stanwood communities.
